

Swarthmore College Profile

Founded in 1864, Swarthmore College is a small private liberal arts and engineering institution located in the Philadelphia Pennsylvania suburb of Delaware County. The school itself is actually situated geographically within the residential community of Swarthmore Borough. The footprint of the site is split into 2 large facilities, one being the north/western edge of the campus adjacent to Crum Woods, the second being the south, eastern edge of the campus by Elm Avenue. Parrish Hall links both sides of the campus together with a large grassy area called Parrish Beach. Swarthmore is unique because it has a large suburban school feel to it, while still being small in regard to student population. The campus is very big, but it feels smaller than the observed geographical footprint.

The college has a large footprint of approximately 399 acres of park like property within the northwestern suburb of Philadelphia. The physical layout observes numerous historic buildings shared by students, and local residents. The campus itself has approximately 68 buildings including lecture, residential, research, and dining facilities. The overall campus map is typical for a college setting with wide sidewalks, grass field meeting places, and park like benches. The pedestrian flow of traffic within the facility was centered between Parrish Hall, Lang Performing Arts, and the new Science Center due to the time of day. My student tour guide also told me that classes are taught outside the science center during comfortable weather days with the help of several large outdoor blackboards. Sharples dining hall also gets busy at all hours of the day when school is in session according to my student guide.

The campus buildings and open spaces were very clean and well maintained during my observations. These open spaces allow students the ability to interact with each other in a non-educational manner due to the high number of observed meeting places on campus. Swarthmore students, faculty, and employees enjoy a community, within a community lifestyle in regard to on, and off campus activities and resources. The college also provides several critical student resources including student housing on campus for all 4 years, which helps students connect with each other throughout the year.

The published demographic information for the college describes a culturally diverse student population with students from all across the world. Swarthmore College has developed a large campus community to offer students a Liberal Arts and Science, and Engineering educational format to enhance it's commitment to different types of career endeavors.

Swarthmore College: The College is home to relatively small campus population of approximately 714 male, and 776 female full time students. The average age of a freshman is 18 years old. 16% of students are from Pennsylvania. Others are from 48 states, and 38 foreign countries. Students on campus provide a diverse multi-cultural makeup including 44% of students are white, 17% Asian Americans, 9% are Black, 11% are Hispanic, and 11% are the race is unknown.

Published Academic Standards for Admission Programs

Swarthmore College has a large educational system for a small private school, which offers Liberal Arts, and Sciences, and Engineering programs. Below is a specific list of under graduate admission requirements.

Swarthmore College: Freshman Class: 5,242 applied, 930 accepted, 365 enrolled. SAT Verbal 740, SAT Math 710. ACT 31 Application Deadline Fall Early Decision: November 15, Winter Early Decision: January 2, Regular Decision: January 2.

Faculty/ Classroom: 61% of faculty is male, 39% female. All both teach and do research. The average class size in an introductory lecture is 22; laboratory, 10; and in a regular course, 15.

Student / Faculty Ratio: 8 to 1

Retention Rate: 4% do not continue beyond 1st year, 92% remain to graduate.

Campus Footprint: An observation of the internal campus setting provides students and employees with several types of student services including physical fitness, residence, library services, and cultural meeting places and dining halls. I observed heavy pedestrian traffic from this area of the campus due to the location of the dining hall, and the time of day. The internal design of the school is diamond shaped with students reading, eating, and talking to each other in the middle of the campus beach. This an interesting point to make in regard to the school's location within a suburb of a major city. When you walk onto the Swarthmore campus you forget where you are for the moment, the campus landscape is big and beautiful.

The university's observed focal point of reference during the campus tour was the area in, and around Parrish Hall, which is the center of the campus. Student pedestrian sidewalks all converge at this point from several locations around the campus including the academic, and residence halls. When you look at the campus map you can easily observe the main focal point. My tour guide told us that students come to the beach and grassy areas around the student center to relax and talk about school and life.

The design and physical setting of Swarthmore is unique because the campus is situated around a small Pennsylvania suburban borough. The physical security footprint is also unique because the college uses physical landscaping, not metal fencing around the school's perimeter to give it a welcoming, and private community feel to it. This physical barrier provides access control to several vehicle, and pedestrian entrances, which requires I.D. for access control in the day, and night as well. The internal campus landscape is unique because the school is split into 2 parts, including a huge nature preserve called Crum Woods, along with several residence, lecture, and student services halls on opposite ends of the campus. The college's performing arts, and recreation buildings are situated in the middle for easy access from all points of the campus.

The physical setting of the college allows students to get away from classes to retreat to individual residence halls, which are located on both ends of the school. These types of structures enhance the campus lifestyle within the schools sprawling footprint. The buildings geographical design features form a large diamond in which students can enter, and leave the campus from several locations. Parking resources is also a big feature on campus due to the limited number of parking permits issued to students and employees. Parking is a big challenge for public safety at Swarthmore because the college is located in a small community with a limited number of parking lots for students, employees, and visitors. Students at Swarthmore have access to a main line (SEPTA) train station within walking distance to the campus, which helps limit the need for student parking permits.

The college is also linked together by several township streets within it's massive real estate holdings with virtually all of the university's lecture halls, arts & science pavilions, residence halls, and historic buildings tied within it's large real estate holdings. The layout of the college is unique because students can retreat to their residence halls, or they can travel to other facilities to experience big campus living. The City of Philadelphia is only 30 minutes away by train for students who want to enjoy the so-called "One Big Campus" environment. The City of Philadelphia is called One Big Campus because the city has over 18 public, and private schools within a relatively short distance to each other. These types of educational, and social resources enhance the overall campus community lifestyle within each schools urban & suburban footprint because students can travel to different areas of the city in a relatively short period of time.

Finally, Swarthmore has a classic historical northeastern campus feel to it because the school is located in a small suburban town in Delaware County Pennsylvania. The community itself is a short distance geographically from the City of Philadelphia, which allows for additional social, and cultural opportunities for students to enjoy during the year. This area is filled with historic architecture, parks, mixed residential properties in Swarthmore, and additional commercial properties on Baltimore Pike in neighboring Springfield. Swarthmore College takes up a great portion of real estate in the area with 399 acres and over 68 buildings. I have mentioned a description of the massive real estate holdings because you are more likely to see a Swarthmore College public safety official than a local Police Officer from Swarthmore & Springfield Police Departments in this general area.

Local weather: Weather is also an issue to consider for students preparing for a college experience. Swarthmore enjoys all four seasons of weather including rain and snow. Northeast weather patterns sometimes allow for temperatures to drop below 32 degrees for a considerable amount of time during the winter. Pennsylvania also gets it's share of rain during the spring and summer months as well. A strong indicator of pedestrian traffic around the university can be identified by the northeast weather patterns. Student parking within close proximity to university buildings and student shuttle services help reduce the exposure literally and figuratively.

Community Profile

Swarthmore Borough has been described as a quiet suburban town that was built around its local college with students, and local residents enjoying the Delaware County Pennsylvania landscape. The township has also been described as a family centered residential community within striking distance to Philadelphia. Swarthmore also has an intellectual side due to its historical neighborhood architecture and close physical relationship to Swarthmore College. The borough is favorable to students and local residents because it offers a local pedestrian walkway (Magill Walk) onto Chester Road (Rt. 320), which links students, and local residents to a several restaurants and local shops within the southern edge of town. Local residents and students call this area “The Ville”. Chester Road is the main thoroughfare that travels north & south connecting the local town of Springfield on Baltimore Pike to the college.

The community has a small city feel to it when you are walking to neighborhood eateries on the southern edge of town. Residents and students also enjoy several social destinations when walking, or driving to Baltimore Pike from Chester Road including the Springfield Mall, and several strip malls featuring several national food, and consumer chains. The walk from Swarthmore’s eastern edge to the above-mentioned meeting places is approximately 20 minutes from the campus. Students who walk off the campus and make a left turn to the southern edge of Chester Road will find the R-3 Train Station for (SEPTA), which provides public transportation to the City of Philadelphia.

The borough itself is located within the northeastern area of the state, which makes it convenient to several suburban communities and highway networks. SEPTA provides local rail service in the area with the R-3 Media/Elwyn Line. This rail corridor links to the 30th Street Station which is a main link to several different commuter trains and the northeast corridor. The 30th Street Station also links to Amtrak, New Jersey Transit, and the Philadelphia International Airport via the R-1 line. Swarthmore also has several main roadways that connect the community to major state highways including Route 476 that links to the Pennsylvania Turnpike, and Interstate 95. Shopping, restaurants, and hotel chains can be found within these major transportation networks after a short drive from the campus. Appendix #1 on the back page of this profile lists several of observed resources in close proximity to the school.

The following demographics for Swarthmore Borough describe a multi-cultural community within a total population of 6,170 according to the U.S. Census Bureau. Swarthmore College has strong relationships with the township because they share community services including public safety, and cultural resources. An example of this commitment can be observed through the university’s community services handbook that describes educational programs, health care programs and services, legal programs and services to local residents who may require community help.

A Census Bureau community survey highlights several characteristics to describe the population including: 2,917 residents are male, 3,253 are female. 85.9% of residents are white, 4.7% are African American, 3.4% is Hispanic or Latino, and 5.5% are Asian. The median age of population is 28 years old. 79.5% of residents are 18 years old or over, 64.8 % are over 21, and 13.8% of borough residents is over the age of 65. The issue of housing in Swarthmore is also interesting. 96.6% of all housing units within the township are occupied. 27.9% of housing units are renter-occupied, while 72.1% of units are owner-occupied. Only 3.6% of total available housing was vacant.

Campus Life

Swarthmore College is a multi-cultural campus environment that provides students with an outstanding social, and educational atmosphere. The admissions demographics paint a picture of a very diverse community with students from all over the world. The local community of Delaware Valley only adds to the universities international status because the community has multi-cultural roots as well. Swarthmore also addresses the issue of ecology in a positive way. The physical campus environment is registered as a national arboretum with trees and bushes that are individually named by type, and species. The college has also build a state of the art (Green) science building that incorporates several green technologies including clean ground water technology. And finally, the campus is clean and well maintained and the economic conditions are favorable to students and local residents due to the available services in walking distance to the school.

The emotional climate of the entire community is positive because students are involved with local community, and campus groups. An observation of this very positive emotional climate can be found by looking at the endless student flyers posted throughout the campus on walls, doors, windows, and light poles. These flyers describe upcoming activities and they invite all students to enjoy the clubs, performing arts, and public discussions on world events. Swarthmore's students went as far as hanging banners outside residence halls to invite students to attend social events on campus, which was very nice to see. Social networking beyond the campus walls is also a very important issue to be observed at Swarthmore. Students at the college are encouraged to participate in externships with alumni to gain real world experience. These programs, along with internships and global learning centers offer important information about studying abroad. These types of programs help to round out educational activities on campus.

This issue of school culture and emotional attachment is also a very important part of campus life because everyone wants to have a connection and emotional fit to their new school and community. Swarthmore has done a great job developing positive social systems with it's students by providing a series of coordinated programs including workshops and seminars for freshman students. This type of process provides a foundation for learning and personal growth providing over 100 academic clubs, student organizations, and over 9 intramural sports activities. Swarthmore also has 10 NCAA teams for men, and 12 for women.

Campus life at Swarthmore can be considered very active due to several notable student venues including the Parrish Hall, which is the main student recreational center on campus. The college also has a student run performing arts venue within the Lang Performing Arts Center. These on campus facilities allows students to enjoy more than academic excellence, it gives them the opportunity to develop social relationships by experiencing school sports, performing arts, history, cultural events, restaurants, and local museums together.

Swarthmore has also developed a “Tri-College Consortium” with Bryn Mawr, and Haverford Colleges that allows students from each of these institutions to share educational, and social resources throughout the year. These schools are located off Lancaster Avenue within the suburban Philadelphia community of Main Line. Students receive daily shuttle services to all three schools to maintain these newly acquired relationships. Swarthmore also provides it’s students with cross-registration educational resources with the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, but the school doesn’t provide a shuttle, students have to take public transportation.

Students at Swarthmore also have the ability to enjoy suburban sports activities within the Delaware Valley including it’s consortium schools and big institutions like Villanova and Saint Joseph’s. These schools participate on the big stage in regard to Division I NCAA sports including the Big East Conference. Students can enjoy these big campus sports events within several local colleges throughout the year. Swarthmore students can also enjoy cultural, and social events on these campuses, or take the train from Swarthmore (40 Minutes) or Bryn Mawr (20 Minutes) to Philadelphia to enjoy big city life.

Student Housing: The purpose of student housing is to provide safe and reasonable accommodations for students living away from home. The issue of housing and dormitory life is a critical element of overall campus life because students spend a large amount of time in their rooms. Student housing units historically come in 3 different styles including traditional corridor, suite, and apartment style units.

Swarthmore College guarantees on campus housing for all four years through a lottery system. Students who have filed their intent to reside on campus by the stated deadline and who have continuously registered as full time students receive housing. The school has started upgrading housing resources for all students through it’s capital improvement initiatives. Swarthmore also has a unique way of providing housing for students. The college doesn’t have freshman dorms, it has upper classmen living on the floors so new students can learn, what they need to learn about the school in a more relaxed fashion. Information about housing can be found on the quick links page of this document.

Off Campus Housing: Swarthmore has been described as a small private college within a small residential community. The reason I have mentioned the overall community is to re-assert the point that Swarthmore’s network of facilities has encapsulated it’s real estate holdings within the area. The campus footprint allows every student to have housing within walking distance to college facilities. The issue of off campus housing has a different feel to it compared to other university housing demands. The college itself has 98% of its student population living on campus which reduces the need, or demand for off campus housing. Students who want off campus housing can find information about available resources on the quick links page.

Public Transportation: Campus transportation resources for Swarthmore's students are available through the college's shuttle system, which provides van service for daily classes, student activities, and links to local shopping and restaurants. This service is crucial to students who don't have cars because it provides transportation services to the entire university community. Swarthmore students also have a (SEPTA) station along the R-3 Media/Elwyn Line to take them into the city.

The school's van service provides reliable transportation to students who don't, or can't have vehicles on campus. The university also has a very large number of out of state students who don't know the streets and highways very well. Knowing the area is key because students who come from local states may know the area better and may be able to walk or drive to local destinations. Foreign, and out of state students might opt to take a bus or train to their destination because they don't want to risk getting lost on local roads.

Description of Campus Public Safety Plans & Procedures: Campus communities are unique places due to their populations and physical layouts. In some areas of the United States you really can't tell where a campus begins or ends because people walk through, drive through, and take campus transportation through all areas of the campus footprint. Swarthmore College has developed public safety plans and procedures to keep students, and employees safe. The school's general public safety plans and procedures can be found in the document "Emergency Preparedness Plan" which gives students and employees a list of instructions, procedures, codes of conduct, and response strategies to follow while on campus. This information can be found in Swarthmore College's Annual Public Safety Report. The college emergency plan information can be found:

On Campus Emergency Resources:

Crisis Management Plans & Procedures Local Community: Historically, FEMA has identified risk factors within specific geographical areas of the United States. The western states have fires and earthquakes, the mid-west has tornados, the gulf, and eastern seaboard states have hurricanes. And finally, the northeast has a combination of snow and wind related weather events. Each area of the United States requires crisis management plans to help people recover from disaster events. Colleges and universities usually develop plans and procedures that complement local community resources, in some cases schools are required by state and federal law to develop plans and procedures.

The State of Pennsylvania has developed emergency management resources to help residents to prepare, respond, and recover from a host of natural, and man made events. The state agency responsible for emergency operations is the Emergency Management Agency. Contact information for this state agency www.readypa.org

Innovative Emergency Communications: Swarthmore College has developed reverse 911 systems that sends several types of emergency notifications through e-mail and phone text message systems. Campus alerts, and weather related information is sent through this system. The university also has active shooter protocols for students to follow during an emergency including lock-down, and lockout procedures. These messages are usually received within 1-2 minutes of emergency broadcast and allow university officials to adhere to Clery Act requirements for timely warnings of emergency events.

Campus Access Control & Security Systems: The design, and physical setting of a particular institution has elements relating to the overall culture and social system on campus. Since college and university campuses are designed to offer (open) movement of people through it's borders, the issue of design, along with effective use of space can reduce both the incidence, and fear of crime. This design feature is called "Crime Prevention through Environmental Control." The proper design and effective use of the built environment can lead to a reduction in the fear and incidence of crime and an improvement in the quality of life. The issues of identifying formal gathering and high-risk areas within a campus footprint are also critical to public safety resources because manpower must be observed in these areas.

The design and physical setting of Swarthmore College isn't unique for a suburban campus because the footprint is encapsulated within a local township in Pennsylvania. The campus footprint itself highlights several historic buildings, and large grassy areas, which form a large barrier around the main campus. These buildings, along with natural landscaping form a large diamond that's several city block long, and wide. These physical security design features seem to have enhanced the footprint by using natural, and manmade resources to limit access to the overall campus.

The university has several entrances and exits to maximize the pedestrian traffic flow within the facility, the issue of vehicle traffic on campus is minimal due to the suburban setting and a limited number of street parking spots. Swarthmore's public safety department deploys officers to several access points around the campus during the day to reduce the number of people who may not have legitimate business on campus. At night, some of these entrances get secured with a lock and chain to further reduce access to the institution. Public safety also maintains visitor screening with clearly worded signage that directs visitors to a welcome area within Parrish Hall (Admissions), visitors who wish to walk around the campus without an escort can, but only during daylight hours.

Formal gathering areas within the Swarthmore's campus are situated in, and around Parrish beach, which is directly out side Parrish hall, another main gathering areas is the performing arts, and new science buildings that go straight through the quad to Kohlberg Hall. These areas are the main observed focal points of the campus with several large grassy areas in and around the lecture, and the student center. The quad is a textbook example of CPTED design because it allows for natural surveillance and open space for people to enjoy while still providing some type of ownership within the property.

The issue of high-risk areas on campus has been identified during annual risk assessments by security, and feedback by all intuitional stakeholders including public safety officials. The department maintains uniform patrol, fixed security posts, and high tech remote resources to highlight formal surveillance throughout the campus. The department also has security officers patrolling on foot in several high-risk areas including the student center, sports venues, residence halls, and the library. Swarthmore public safety officers also patrol the exterior of the college in several types of vehicles including 4-wheel drive trucks. Swarthmore's public safety officers don't have formal arrest powers; they have to notify Swarthmore Borough to investigate criminal activity on campus. The school's public safety department has developed enhanced lighting, student honor codes, and formal surveillance resources (CCTV) for perimeter areas because it helps with surveillance and gives students and visitors an enhanced feeling of safety and security.

The campus high-risk areas including the residence halls require a higher degree of natural and formal surveillance for students and visitors. Public safety has told me that the school is in the process of upgrading to HD Card Readers for the residence halls. I observed the other schools within the Tri-College Consortium have these types of access control resources for their residence halls. Students on campus within Swarthmore are safe in my opinion due to the extremely low crime rate, and the positive social resources on campus. And finally, public safety has CCTV resources within several areas of the campus to enhance formal surveillance and security.

Descriptions of Published Policies and Procedures to Comply with the Clery Act

The Clery Act. The Crime Awareness and Campus Security Act of 1990 requires all postsecondary institutions participating in the Title IV student financial aid programs to disclose campus crime statistics, university violations and disciplinary data, and finally security information to the U.S. Department of Education on an annual basis. The legislation also describes several required policy statements that address public safety and security issues. Below is a sample list of Clery Act Policy Statements for colleges and universities to publish each year within their prospective crime report/audits.

Required policy statements include: addressing timely warnings, disclosure of crime statistics, reporting criminal offenses, confidential reporting, security and access control, arrest authority, security awareness programs, crime prevention programs, sex offenses, alcoholic beverages, illegal drugs, substance abuse programs, and general codes of conduct. Swarthmore's Clery Act info can be found on the quick links page.

Caveat: Not all Swarthmore College public safety officers have arrest powers; patrol supervisors have State Police Special Officer Training that provides comprehensive resources in the public safety profession. The school does respond to emergency calls with the help of Swarthmore Borough Police. The university also provides security resources on campus but the following statement from the department education offers this advice. “ The department data reported by the institutions have not been subjected to independent verification by the U.S. Department of Education. Therefore, e department cannot vouch for the accuracy of the data. Swarthmore’s Clery Act crime data can be found at: <http://ope.ed.gov/security/Index.aspx>

Local Crime Statistics: The Federal Bureau of Investigation’s Uniform Crime Report for 2008 has developed crime statistics for Swarthmore Borough Pennsylvania. In 2008 the Police Department reported 13 Violent Crimes, 0 Murders, 1 Forcible Rape, Robberies, 12 Aggravated Assaults, 94 Property Crimes, 18 Burglaries, 74 Larceny Thefts, and finally 2 Motor Vehicle Thefts. The crime of Arson was reported 1 time.

Emergency Medical Technicians: Swarthmore College has emergency medical technicians who respond with the Borough Fire Department EMS to provide ambulance service to students, residents, and visitors through emergency notification systems. Below is the contact information for services, and general information for the local hospitals.
